(Continued from Page 1.) ikewise dug-generally with the same results. In fact, the explorations of hese people have convinced them that their respective finds of water and pipe will more than pay for the initial ost of the lands. It seems that a former plantation man laid down a water conduit and that the present management many months ago abandoned the operation of the tube, for the reason that the re-peated visits and attacks, on the cane, of the insect pest known under the entomological name of "Pohono Hawallensis," had made the pipe-irrigated section of this district a profitiess one to the company, the leaf hopper being of the same genus and closely alled to the insect spoken of allied to the insect spoken of.

Then the land was laid out to be developed "on American lines," and, in doing the developing the first settler "struck ile" in the form of water pipe. Preparations for a grand luau are in progress, it being a custom of Kau that a special find, or haul, of fish that a special find, or haul, of fish should be commemorated, Col. Nor-ris, who, by the way, has been unwell but who is now convalescing, has giv-en four fat cattle. Makun-kane-alli, a part Chinese pig raiser, donated seven fat animals for roasting, while Y. adjoining the telephone office.
It is said that the luau will be the occasion for commencing the political work incident to the coming County and Territorial elections.

There can be no doubt that the land matters, past, present and future, of the Kau people will cut considerable ice in next November.
"The land for the people," was the burden of the song when, last Tues-day, the settlers and intending settlers met at Hanalei's barn, at Kiolakaa, to formulate their desires and demands as citizens of the United States. Commissioner Pratt is expected to visit Kau shortly, but it is freely pre-dicted that if he apportions the public lands so as Americans have but "three acres and a cow," there will be such a time as to put to blush the period when Rome was said to have howied.

A public reading and recreation room is mooted for Walohinu. It is proposed to form a stock company and build two large rooms, with caretak-
